Pregnancy Resource Centers

A pregnancy resource center is a non-profit community center or clinic which primarily serves pregnant women and mothers of infants, is not an abortion provider and does not charge for any of its services. While most are not clinics and do not pretend to be, in most states they are able to offer free pregnancy tests and prenatal vitamins. They provide access to numerous social services, including parenting classes, options counseling, baby supplies, and other financial aid. Some PRC's are limited licensed clinics working under the direction of a physician. Medical services provided vary from clinic to clinic, but often include ultrasounds, on-site prenatal exams, and/or STD testing. On the list below, those clinics offering limited medical services are indicated with a * after their name.
